

IF THE HEADLINE IS BIG ENOUGH, IT MAKES THE NEWS BIG ENOUGH

In the cells in the diagram below, place the letters in the titles of some of the most popular movies featuring characters that own or work for (or once owned or worked for) a newspaper. The list of titles is for you to determine. Use only one letter per cell, and do not include punctuation marks.

To assist you, some of the cells in each title are connected by lines to cells that contain identical letters in other titles. The connecting lines cross but do not intersect—treat each crossing as one line going over the top of the other.

For example, if one of the entries was NEWSIES and the entry below it was MEET JOHN DOE, then there would be a line connecting the N of NEWSIES to the N in JOHN, and two lines connecting the Es in NEWSIES to the Es in MEET and/or DOE.

There are two columns of titles in the diagram. The cells in the titles at the top of each column are connected to each other, as are the cells in the titles at the bottom of each column.

When you finish filling in the titles, the letters in the five shaded cells can be arranged to spell a common English word. That word is the password for the next page.
